Through the lens of cognitive science, Jokes and the Linguistic Mind investigates jokes that play on some aspect of the structure and function of language. In so doing, Debra Aarons shows that these 'linguistic jokes' can evoke our tacit knowledge of the language we use. Analyzing hilarious examples from movies, plays and books, Jokes and the Linguistic Mind demonstrates that tacit linguistic knowledge must become conscious for linguistic jokes to be understood. The book examines jokes that exploit pragmatic, semantic, morphological, phonological and semantic features of language, as well as jokes that use more than one language and jokes that are about language itself. With its use of jokes as data and its highly accessible explanations of complex linguistic concepts, this book is an engaging supplementary text for introductory courses in linguistics, psycholinguistics and cognitive science.

"They've got a preserved nun here." In the summer of 1995 Hielke Hylkema (1950–2021) walked from Groningen in the north of the Netherlands to Montpellier in the south of France. A 1150 mile walk over ancient Roman roads with minimal luggage. He tried to avoid as many barking dogs as possible, practiced Tai Ji in quiet spots along the way, and explored local, Roman, and European history. Meuse and Marne brought him to Paris. The Seine, Loire, and Rhône accompanied him to the Mediterranean. He hoped the long-distance hike would reduce his anxiety, and maybe he would even find a girlfriend along the way. It is a travelogue with some additional commentary about the local sights and restaurants. In each chapter, there are small maps so that you can follow along with this journey. The book is filled with historical facts and observations, a touch of Chinese wisdom, and reflections on the books that influenced him (Henry David Thoreau, Lin Yutang, Robert M. Pirsig, Michel de Montaigne) Hielke chose history as his secondary theme, with an emphasis on the history of the regions and cities he passed. How did it all begin and how much of what you see today, points back to a distant past? How are past and present connected? He looked for clues in the names of the places and regions, in language, religion, and local customs. So by the end of it you will have learned a decent amount about early European (and French) history. From Celts to Charlemagne. The history of the Romans plays a leading role because written European history begins with the Romans. Many French cities started as Roman cities, and a large part of the Roman road network in France is still there in its original state. Hielke tells what can still be seen of these ancient Roman roads. They're pretty easy to spot on a map because they are all very straight. After the Romans, it was the Catholic Church that defined the face of Europe, so you can also read a little bit about the rise of Christianity and about the saints who took over tasks from the Roman gods

The tale is simple, if grim: a disenfranchised teenage boy from the housing projects on the outskirts of Paris rapes and murders the manager of the supermarket where his mother works. But Gerard Gavarry is a writer who knows how literary inventiveness can shed new light on a serious subject, and Hoppla! 1 2 3 tells its story three times, in three separate sections, each in a different tone or mode and with different sets of images and vocabularies - borrowed from tropical botany, the shipping industry, and ancient Greece. Gavarry's bloody and poetic narrative takes dead aim at the social, political, and personal roots of violence, and argues for the transformative power of fiction.

Bevor Alexandre Dumas mit "Die drei Musketiere" und "Der Graf von Monte Christo" weit über Frankreich hinaus berühmt wurde, hatte er 1843 "Georges" geschrieben, einen Roman, in dem er im Stil seiner Abenteuerromane von Rassismus und Sklaverei in einer französischen Kolonie erzählt. Der Roman ist heute - selbst in Frankreich - fast in Vergessenheit geraten, wie auch den wenigsten Lesern bekannt ist, dass Dumas selbst afrikanische Vorfahren hat. Sein 1762 in Saint-Domingue (heute Haiti) geborener Vater entstammte der Beziehung zwischen einem französischen Adligen und einer dort lebenden afrikanischen Sklavin, die er sich gekauft hatte.
